

Bonjour/hi

Hello, my name is Alexander Ravvin and I am a 20 year old music student born and raised in Montreal. I write to you today to address my concern with the GNL project.

Growing up, I have been taught, through experience and by reading that the global warming crisis we are currently racing towards is extremely serious. As a rich country, we often don't feel it's immediate ramifications of our lifestyles, making it easier for us to keep on ignoring the inevitable. And as a young person, I know where decisions like the investment in the GNL project leaves me.

I was always taught in school that the Quebecois were close with nature, and that we valued it not just culturally but also scientifically, staying aware of the potential repercussions (that the earth is now facing) of global warming and the destruction of ecosystems. Additionally, I was taught that we listen to each other. This is a crucial time to prove both of these things to the Quebecois people. The GNL project is a disaster along these lines and seems like a ridiculous investment at such a crucial time, both in relation to the economy and the climate crisis. Let's do this the right way, setting a good example, together, and invest in projects that aren't going to blow up in our faces. This transition needs to happen yesterday.

Sincèrement, sincerely, Alexander Ravvin
